What we're doing: study goals

Researchers at the University of Florida are using Life Story Books to help people with early-stage dementia feel good about themselves even when they have memory difficulties, early dementia.

Your participation will help others: we want to know the best way to create digital Life Story Books that help older people with memory problems/dementia.

Who is running the project?

The Life Story Lab (Director: Dr. S. Bluck) is made up of researchers interested in how individuals learn from, their unique life experiences. Learn more about our projects online: www.lifestorylab.psych.ufl.edu

Participate from home

The entire study will take place over the phone. It consists of four phone meetings. It may involve time spent at home looking over your personal Life Story Book.

How do I get involved?

Contact us so we can tell you more about the study and, if you like, schedule you for your first phone meeting. We are happy to hear from people across the United States. If you know someone who is eligible, please pass this opportunity on to them! We are also collaborating with the Alzheimer's Association, Florida Chapters to help educate and inform the community about this project.
